CLOSE BANK AFTER RUN BY NORTH END CROWDS, PRESIDENT IS MISSING

The First National Bank, at 333 Summer St., was closed today by bank commissioner Jay A. Hovey, who said it was threatened.

The run on the bank started at 10:30 and bank officials communicated with Commissioner Hovey shortly after noon.

Commissioner Hovey sent a deputy, who noted the bank and an audit of the books was begun immediately.

Within 15 minutes after the bank had been closed, several hundred depositors, many of them women shrieking and gesticulating while attempting to gain entrance, were milling in the street.

Police, sent from the Hovey St. station, quickly returned order, however, and then stepped to the door of whom they knew, that the bank had been closed primarily for their protection.

The frightened depositors had sums in the bank they said varying from $40 to $100. No depositors had sprayed her and her daughter with a soporific drug.

They had been out into the night before and had returned to their hotel apartment fired out and quickly went to sleep. This thief is believed to have used a telephone.

CALL VANZETTI 'CONFESSION' INCONSISTENT

Local authorities today either ignored or scoffed at the alleged confession of Frank Silva, as published in the Outlook and Independent, a weekly magazine, exonerating Bartolomeo Vanzetti from any part in the Bridgewater attempted harbor for which he was tried and convicted.

The magazine contends that the conviction of Vanzetti had no important bearing on his later conviction with Nicola Sacco of the holding and murder of the South Braintree paymaster for which both were executed.

Governor Fuller stated he was not any more impressed with the confession than he was with that of Celestino V. Madriano, and Sanford Bates, commissioner of corrections, said he was not interested. Police officials pointed the confession to pieces, pointing out many inconsistencies.

Moses of New Hampshire, chairman of the eastern advisory committee of the Hoover-Curtis campaign, on returning to New York today from a speaking tour in the West, scouted Democratic claims that Senator Norris' declaration for Smith would bring Nebraska into the Democratic camp.

Commenting on the campaign generally, he asserted "the silly season" of the campaign was on and that the Democrats would continue to "amuse themselves with fantastic exaggerating regarding the result of the election."

Another feature of the show is the music being furnished by the Francis Simmonds Women's orchestra, directed by Edna Simmonds Lamb.

All the fine points about making good cakes are being taught to the crowds of women about the "sweetest" booth. For instance, a cake will turn all finer grained if it is put into the beaten egg whites and folded in last instead of being sifted into the flour. The mysteries of molding jelly salads evenly, the art of serving various chafers and growlards at formal dinners as well as the seal-home generally are being demonstrated at one of the largest food shows in years.

Hunt Big Game in Fatal Lowenstein Plane

Croydon, Eng., Oct. 29 (AP).—Using the airplane from which Alfred Lowenstein, the British aviator, fell into the English Channel and was killed last July 4, a party of sportsmen, headed by Lieut. Comdr. Giles Kistner, left today for Africa on the first of a "game hunt."

"We hope to reach Nairobi in about 10 days," said Kistner. "We will make our headquarters there and enter the jungle from the coast."

Then, looking for big game, we hope to get a shot or two from the plane, but the usual procedure will be to wait reports from scouts and then, instead of having a single long drive shoot, fly to the spot.

Financing has been specially arranged for the party, and the air, as well as the taking of moving pictures of herds of game on the coast.

SEEK TO LINK NEW CRIMES ON BAG SNATCHER

George Hill, 50-year-old Saturday night bag snatcher, now in Superiorville Hospital, with thigh shattered by police bullet, was today linked up by Capt. Thomas Danvers of the Somerville police with a case of bag snatching in that city.

Following a search by Capt. Danvers and Det. O'Connell of Hill's rooms on Bowen ave., Mattine it was announced they recovered various cases, jewelry, store notes and other articles stolen from women in five bag snatching cases on many Saturday nights in Somerville.

Hill's wounding and arrest resulted from the snatching of a bag from the hands of Mrs. Jeanne M. Kessler of 14 Heath st., Boston, late on Fenwick st. He was picked up on Fenwick st. and taken to the police station.

At the Bowen ave. address, it was said that Hill went out only on Saturdays.

Early Hours Enabled Sen. Curtis to Stamp 30 States in 9 Weeks

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 29 (AP)—Early to bed and early to rise in a practice with Senator Charles Curtis, the Republican vice-presidential nominee, and to that old-fashioned habit he attributes his ability to go ahead on his strenuous speaking campaign.

In nine weeks the 68-year-old candidate has "stamped" in 30 states, traveling almost continuously and speaking several times a day.

It is one of the most arduous campaigns ever undertaken by a national candidate. In 1924, the Senator was ready to enter the first state, calling for votes in six states in as many days this week. Tonight the nominee is to speak here.

Friday nights, telling people at the house he visits to get noisy today by his relatives in New York.

The police believe he is a New York stranger with a thick nose and today forwarded his fingerprints to Kansas D. Hill, the state elector. In an attempt to obtain a positive identification, the police are also convinced Hill was the perpetrator of all the bag snatching which have taken place here since the past 16 Saturday nights.

2 DONATIONS OF $12,000 EACH IN JEW DRIVE

Two hundred workers will make their first report of funds subscribed to the $100,000 maintenance drive of the United Palestine Appeal, which opened today at an informal dinner tomorrow night at the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Louis A. Lipky of the National Zionist Organization will make the principal address at the meeting presided over by Alex R. Wagner, chairman of the drive.

The Zionist headquarters at 21 School st. are handling all contributions.

First to donate were Nathan Gordon and Miss Anshin, each of whom gave $12,000. Of this amount $5000 was subscribed directly to the fund, the remaining $7000 to be held in trust for 30 years, its income to be devoted to the Haifa Technicum in Palestine.

A glowing tribute of the Jewish national homeland was painted by Dr. Weismann, who said the Jews would soon be able to "rebuild their 'without the least indignity'."

Harvard Likely to Clean Up for Rest of Season

LATERAL PASS IS BIG SHOT OF OFFENSE

By BILL GRINES

Under P. D. Haughton, Harvard reached the peak of its fame in football. The credit for the Crimson's success was rightfully extended to the Haughton System.

When the conversation drifts around to Haughton, Rockne, Doble or Hawley systems, the fans become mystified.

Haughton's success has been due to 4—his deception in the line of his running and air attacks. Doble comes through by passing his power on one spot, while Rockne's system have been more open to attack because of his great overhead game, the success of which has been brought about by decoys.

Now the Haughton system was nothing more or less than 11 decoys, one of whom was a punter. Therefore, the present Harvard team would have been an ideal suggestion for the late Percy U.

HARVARD SHOWED STRENGTH

Since the opening game of the season with Springfield, Harvard has displayed potential strength. Due to the poor position of the Springfield and North Carolina outfalls, the Crimson went into the Army game untired.

Of course, and commendation on the part of Art French and Ben Tinker furnished the opening for the Army to score its first victory over Harvard.

Although defeated by West Point, it was evident to the close observer that Harvard had the stuff. There were, however, few close observers. Dartmouth came down from the north country fortified with what

INTERFERENCE POWERFUL

The Dartmouth end, Hein Swarthout and Norm Bankart fought gallantly but success was a physical impossibility for them against the big and powerful interferences Harvard sent at them.

Sherman and Lyle were conspicuous at times for Dartmouth but they were also forced to yield ground under the winning thrusts of Trainer and Bill Tinker.

The Harvard line was faster and far more powerful than that of the Green. Also, it was quicker diagnosing plays, shifting to meet Dartmouth's attack in a most intelligent manner. Otherwise, Harvard had little trouble handling the Dartmouth forwards.

Although Capt. French and Dave Guarnaccia were the outstanding

NOTHING FLUKEY IN VICTORY

Despite its victory over Dartmouth, the Crimson will not be given due credit, in some quarters, because Al Marston, Freddie Breitbut and Hal Boone were not at their best. The Green could have had all the Marston, Breitbut and Boone it could control in action.

Are You Becoming Bald?

This is an enlarged sketch of your hair (it has no root). If it did—and you lost it—it could never grow again.

...But the hair merely rests on and around its source of nourishment—a small bulb known as the Papilla or Matrix (Mother of hair). When the scalp is lacking in proper nourishment and stimulation, these minute organs of hair production become inactive—the result being scantily growing hair or baldness.

The Thomas System of hair and scalp treatment stimulates the circulation and sources of hair nourishment, removing all scalp disorders, with the inevitable result, new hair starting to grow again. Results are noticeable from four to ten treatments.

LOOKS EASY TO THE SPECTATORS, BUT IT'S HARD TO STOP

Here is the great Harvard lateral pass. In this instance it went from Guarnaccia to French. Dave took the pass from center and was about to be tackled by Swarthout, so he tossed the oval to Capt. Art French, who raced for a substantial gain. Three of the four Dartmouth players near French are backs. That shows the D secondary was not cleared out by Harvard interferences. When the Harvard interferences get to the defensive secondary, however, there is no stopping the ball carrier. It is a great play, and is worked perfectly by French and Guarnaccia.

B. U. TEAM WILL COMPETE IN WEAVER SHOOT

Boston University will compete with scores of other educational institutions in the Heart Rifle Trophy shoot, 1928, having forwarded its entry to Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commander of the shoot area and official referee of the year's competition.

More than 400 teams will battle for the prize, according to present indications, this number exceeding the previous record which was established last year when the entrance totaled 392.

Among the entrants in the university classification are B. U. and the universities of South Dakota, Kansas, Illinois, Northwestern, Wisconsin, Washington, Minnesota, New Mexico, California, Nevada, Vermont, Maryland, Maine, Pittsburgh, Syracuse, Akron, Cleveland, Georgia, Howard, West Virginia, and Florida.

The College of the City of New York, Kansas State Agricultural College, and Iowa have each entered one or more teams, while Washington University, St. Louis, has registered 10 teams, Howard University, Washington, D. C., and U. of California, State College of Washington and U. of Washington, three teams each.

Twelve teams are entered from among the Kansas City high schools, 10 from Chicago high schools and several from Los Angeles and San Francisco. The military schools are well represented and from each of the 100 or more teams in an effort to repeat its sectional victory of last year.

The Junior team put up a brilliant fight throughout and outplayed its Romeville opponent.

The game was fought on the ground of John Fitzgerald, T. Boardman, and W. Woodbridge in the backfield. It began at right away, was strong on the defensive. As though beaten, the Romeville team showed great promise.

Harvard Drives for Three Tough Foes

Cosch Arnold Horween begins today, with that Dartmouth victory as an inspiration, the second half of his Harvard football schedule with everything in his favor.

At the session this afternoon the final drive for the Pennsylvania, Holy Cross and Yale games will begin.

Harvard faces Lehigh here on Saturday but it is toward those three games on the tail-end of the program that Horween and his assistants are now turning their eyes. The hard but clean game with Dartmouth went very few injuries and all members of the team will be available by Saturday.

For this final drive with the three big games as objectives, Coach Horween is fortunate today in having practically every tool at hand. The hard but clean game with Dartmouth went very few injuries and all members of the team will be available by Saturday.

BRUINS RIDE TO PROVIDENCE THURSDAY

The Bruins will practice at the Providence rink, and Manager Art Ross will put his players through daily workouts of two hours duration to start Thursday.

In the meantime the Bruin players will continue to maintain themselves in the gymnasium of the University Club, with Jess Willard, the University Club director, in charge.

Manager Ross has complete confidence in the program Willard has arranged, and he expects his squad to be ready for what he claims will be the most intensive work ever given a hockey squad in pre-season.

The Bruins squad will go to Providence to begin daily. The practice hours at the Providence rink will be from 11:30 to 2:30 p. m.

The time is short for the team to get into trim for a hard quarter which calls for four of the first five games on the road and only 15 days of practice will be had before the team leaves for Pittsburgh Nov. 13 to open the season there two days later.

At Providence the Bruins may have an opportunity for scrimmages with the local team.

The Bruins will have a squad of 15 players on the Providence rink, and will have two goalies, but Ross is not in favor of serious play among players on his team.

Hugo Nelson and Sully Thurman, regular backs for three seasons, have badly used up in the contract with the Eagles and will have to take things easy all this week in order to be fit to go into the line up against the gymnasts.

Those two men have had a lot of tough luck this year and save them unable to take part in the majority of the scrimmages, because of being carefully nursed along from game to game with little hard work in between.

Volney was turned over to the club as part payment for Danzig Taylor, who reports to the club in the Spring.

PIONEER BACKS HURT IN GAME WITH B. C.

The hard-fought game between Boston University and Boston College for the city championship took a heavy toll among the Pioneer backfield.

Glen O'Brien and Crash Wagner were the only men among the first two sets of backs who entered the game in full condition.

Consequently, the B. U. attack laid a heavy and punishing hammer on the Pioneer backfield.

Fittens Down Saints Without Trouble

The Fittens took sweet revenge on the Saints for Paul's of South Boston. The last Boston team took the Pontiacs eleven into camp 34 to 6. The game was played at Fort Belknap, Wintrop.

The Fittens made five touchdowns and scored in every period. The Saints' Paul and Paul were not in with the Fittens who played the best game of the season.

Three of the Fittens' touchdowns were made on line plunges and two after good forward passes.

Burns scored on a 35-yard run after he got an 18-yard aerial from Yarnell. Robinson's touchdowns also were the result of a forward line by Yarnell.

Wells and Roberts will start at end and for the second-year team. Bord and Magdall at guard. Pedersen at center, and Capt. Pitcock, Martin, Fisher and Muskavits in the backfield.

If someone led you into the new North Station arena blindfolded, and then, after spinning you around a few times, removed the blinders, you would think that you were in the Madison Square Garden, heart of New York's sport life.

The North Station arena looks much like Tex Rickard's garden. In fact, the North Station arena is an exact duplicate of the Gotham garden.

For the benefit of those who have never seen the Madison Square Garden, the Boston Evening American prints today a panoramic view of the interior of the North Station arena.

Workmen are rushing to have the local arena ready for the grand opening on Nov. 17. In the picture above, arrows indicate the features of the new arena.

Eagles Must Fight to Regain Stride

By JOHN B. GILLOOLEY
There's a lot of work ahead of Coach Joe McKenney and his Boston College grid squad; enough to keep them stepping until Major Frank W. Cavanaugh brings his Fordham cohorts here for a holiday collision two weeks from today.

The Eagles haven't another two weeks' layoff, for Coach Joe Schwartz and Manhattan College are scheduled for a set-to with B. C. on Saturday next at Fenway.

This game should be more or less of a pushover. The big spot in B. C.'s plans right now is the clash with Yale and his gang from the Bronx.

Boston College should be in the best Saturday to hand Manhattan the punningest possible. But the team must get back in the same form it was at when it waded through the dirty and watery "Duke."

If it doesn't Fordham is going to hand the Eagles a tumble. Right now, after wins over Holy Cross and W. and J. Fordham knows as a most formidable foe.

Against Boston University the Eagles looked as though they were playing their coming game. Everything in the Boston College game was out of order but a dazzling aerial game.

ABSENCE OF CAPTAIN BURT
It might be the absence of Captain Burt McKelvey that caused the poor showing of Boston College, but it is more reasonable to suppose that the team couldn't get down to business after their long vacation, brought about by the absolute moosehairs at the Heights.

The B. C. backfield was up to the mark in the absence of Weston and Johnston both showed a lack of their ordinary fire and dash. Weston didn't seem to want to knock those B. U. tackle off. For Big Al it was a tough enough game right now and it probably won't be until the Fordham game before he'll knock again.

Murphy played a whale of a game against Duke because the offense of the Blue Devils was made HARVARD has a wonderful opportunity to blaze the way to glory with a victory over Yale this year.

Harvard, for the past two or three years, and particularly since Horween came back to Cambridge to coach, has not been over-endowed with star football material.

The experiments necessary in this building of a definite system of play have cut down Harvard's victories against her major opponents.

Alfonsen experimented with the lateral pass last year and worked it out in such a degree that this year the Guarneria and French and French to Guarneria combination was a real scoring threat against Harvard's future opponents and particularly against Yale.

HORWEEN seems to have placed his reliance more on the lateral than on the forward pass. The much greater than those of competing a forward and Horween's confidence in this particular was undoubtedly well justified in the Yale game this year.

As I recall, the lateral pass was about the only consistent ground game Harvard had against Yale last year.

Now to get down to the development of Capt. French's team.

It could be observed in Harvard's first football game of the season with Princeton, that Harvard had a smooth running offense, with lots of power in the line and two fine running backs in Guarneria and Capt. French.

The critics were sceptical after Harvard's victories over Springfield and North Carolina because, as they claimed, Harvard had too much weight advantage over their lighter opponents in the line. Then line that heavy seasoned Army

If you will light a Chesterfield and smoke it

The popularity of the late Mike Burke and the high type of entertainment offered have added to the appeal to the fans. The testimonial will be the greatest of its kind ever held in Boston. It will surpass even the Martin, Baldwin and Johnny Dwyer testimonials.

JACK JOHNSON, former heavyweight champion of the world, will drop in at the Arena late tomorrow night. Johnson is appearing in his last public match at the Old Edwards track.

Johnson returns once more to the scenes of his early triumphs. Jack was crowned a heavy champion by Revue when Alex McLean first saw his fighting possibilities. McLean developed Johnson into a first class fighter and he won the title during his first trip to Australia.

Johnson became heavyweight champion of the world when he defeated Tommy Burns and Jim Jeffries.

Johnson was a marvelous defensive boxer, while he also could deliver crushing punch. Ed Arthur hit at his head and body with a ferociousness that caused Johnson to experience much trouble with the average run of heavyweights.

Misses Harriot and Margaret Currier of New York, both former national women's golf champions, have offered a golf cup to be competed for by the women golfers of the United States and Canada on the land a chance for competition which will correspond to that of the annual Walker Cup for men.

England and Canada are more than enthusiastic at the prospect of the new trophy.

In its present form the plan is that money will be raised by a series of tournaments, the proceeds of which will go to swell the general fund. None of the women who have won the cup will be allowed to defray their own expenses.

The plan will undoubtedly give a desired stimulus to women's golf the world over. A place on the team representing the United States will be at berth on the Walker Cup team as at present among the tougher nations.

I'm kicking in for a small donation and I know that every mother's son of you will likewise.

SHALL always remember Baker, marvellous hockey and football player. I can visualize him the night he defeated the crack B. A. hockey team at the Arena almost single handed. If he had lived he would have made a great pro hockey player.

"Baker played halfback on the Princeton football team. He was a dashing player and a wonder in going through a broken field.

ST. PETER'S WIN BIG SCHOOL UPSET

By DICK McWENNEY

There were only two usets in Saturday's football game between the defense of Melrose by Winthrop and the rout of Fitchburg by St. Peter's.

Up all Saturday, Melrose has been the victim of a series of decisions poor punned by Lane caused Melrose to fall.

It was hardly expected that Fitchburg with Jimmy Sheehan in the backfield, would be forced to bow in defeat to St. Peter's of Worcester.

St. Peter's team seemed to be ready to hop right into the line and take the game over. The defense held Everett to a scoreless tie, but it took a beating from Nabaak and Fitchburg's offense to get the game to emerge Saturday by dumping a Fitchburg eleven that was completely

Medford, playing its third big game of the season, held Everett scoreless in a contest that was even all the way through.

Hubber Collins claimed that his Myrtle eleven outplayed the invaders, but there was no loud chorus of assent heard after the Medford mentor had made this laudatory remark. There were many fans from Everett who were heard to say that Medford had outplayed Medford just a little bit.

Collins, the little colored basher who was subbing for Haskins at quarter, played a fine defensive game as safety man. In the third period, a Medford punt got away from him as he fell to the ground but he remained calm as well as prostrate, and scooped the pigskin under him as several Medford players swooped down, expecting to recover a loose ball.

Faglucua was supposed to be suffering with tonsillitis, but from the way he hit the Medford line we should imagine that Denny Glidewill spend all this week inoculating the rest of the Everett team so that they will play like the inspired, and supposedly inviolid fallback.

Glidewill's captain, Gerald Griffin, continued to play as well as he in previous contest and to those who have seen the Blue and White gridders in action, that statement means a whole lot. He's good.

Brocton expected to give Maiden a thorough drubbing, but Maiden played great defensive football.

The Story of a "Good" Gunman and His Battles

The contest between a woman of the underworld and a beautiful country girl for the man they both wanted features the latest novel by Robert Terry Shannon, author of "The Taxi Dancer," which starts herewith.

"Blue Blood and Red," Mr. Shannon's new story, deals with the experiences of Eddie Regan, a product of New York's East Side, and member of a notorious gang, who flees from a life of crime to become an eminently respectable citizen of a Southern community.

With his customary skill Mr. Shannon has set forth in gripping fashion Eddie Regan's fight to shake off the evil influences of New York, including the exotic Bernice Verest, and his yearning struggle for higher things embodied in Thorne Thordike.

CHAPTER 1

Everybody in the room, it seemed, had at one time or another slapped Eddie Regan on the back.

They persisted in treating him as a hero although as yet he had accomplished nothing. The liquor they were drinking did not mean a thing on earth to Eddie; he never touched the stuff, anyway. What made his heart beat with an indefinable pleasure was the genial glow of comradeship—the feeling that these men were his intimate friends, that they were going to share lots of money and good times.

Always, there was the risk of prison or death, but nobody thought much about such unpleasant things. Danger was ever in the air and there was a fascinating satisfaction in the knowledge that the gang always stuck together. They had nerve . . . all the nerve in the world.

One thing that flattered Eddie and disconcerted him a lot, too, was trucks and maybe shooting it out, the subtle defiance the gang gave him. Maybe it was because he had a shade more education than the men.

"What this mob needs is a brain top like yours," one of the fellows said, his arm around Eddie's shoulder. "The Big Guy thinks you're a cut-out."

The words flattered Eddie or, at least, aroused in him and Bernice everybody was smoking and some of the guys were laughing their sides.

Eddie Regan knew he should be happy, but there was something about the whole business that flattered him with despondent uncertainty. He was not because these guys were tough eggs, either. All of them had had known them from the time he had been a kid playing in the streets. None of them ever did any work and their racket looked smart from the outside. All of them had good clothes, automobiles, girls.

It was pretty much like that. He wanted the Big Guy himself to convert Eddie that he was a sap for sticking to his job as a shipyard clerk at the wharves because that it was the girl, Bernice Verest, who had swept into Eddie's blood and surged through his veins with a burning intensity that made his mind hot with recklessness.

This was strange, too, because Eddie did not fall easily for the dim idea he was 25 years old, slim and muscular, with a fresh complexion about his face and a deep steadiness in his blue eyes.

Pretty girls had been after him but never one like Bernice Verest. She detached herself from someone else and came to him now. Bernice was without sleeves and velvet arms about his neck. Her face was olive and the eyes were smouldering pools of mysterious desires. A red mouth, soft and luscious, pressed against his lips . . . rose petals intermingled with each trifle.

"Eddie, darling, you make me proud of you," The voice was husky and warm and throbbing. "Tonight you go out on the big job with the rest of the boys. You are braver than anybody else. I won't love you to death. I will, too, Eddie. What do I care whether you buy me next winter a new fur coat or not? If you be my sweetheart, I want you to be one big, brave man. For your sweetheart, Bernice Verest, Eddie's kiss me."

An instinct in Eddie Regan revolted against the public display of affection; his emotion disappeared and he was afraid the other would observe his weakness.

The proper attitude for a gangster was to let the women do all the choosing. A guy that did dilly-dally was held in contempt with a kind of scorn that he never did nice away, even though his heart was clumping and his whole body yearning to crush her in his arms.

The apartment where all of them had gathered belonged to the Big Guy. This was the first time Eddie had ever been admitted to the inner circle. The Big Guy had known and liked him for a long time but it was Bernice who had fixed it up for him to join.

It gave Eddie a thrill even to think about Bernice. She had glittered, anything he was near her. Bernice was a woman of energy and through him. Everything about her was charged with a current that gave him a kind of dizziness at each contact. She wasn't any other—she was practically impossible to win. There had been a whole sweetheart in her life and she had been true to him. But now she was all off now—the poor guy was doing twenty years in Sing Sing.

And Eddie was the first. The only one she had given a tumble to. He was all unattracted.

Over in a corner, he found a vacant chair dropping down he hit a cigarette and looked at Bernice who was detaching about casually from one group to another. She moved with the grace of a serpent, there was a way about her hips and shoulders that no other girl on earth had.

Her fish was the smoothest, the softest, the firmest on earth. He could feel his pulse beating as he felt her wicked tenderness when his lustful eyes were upon him. She was dazzled on of his vision. She was his for the taking. A rich purple plum hanging ripe on the branch. All he had to do was to join up with the mob. Tonight was the night. Up to the man Thorne Thordike was a soft building, muscular with a soft of silk. A mere matter of a name, a watchman, of barely leading two

HEARST

WHO ARE THEY

These 20 Million Readers?

No two trees are exactly alike—but there is no mistaking an oak forest.

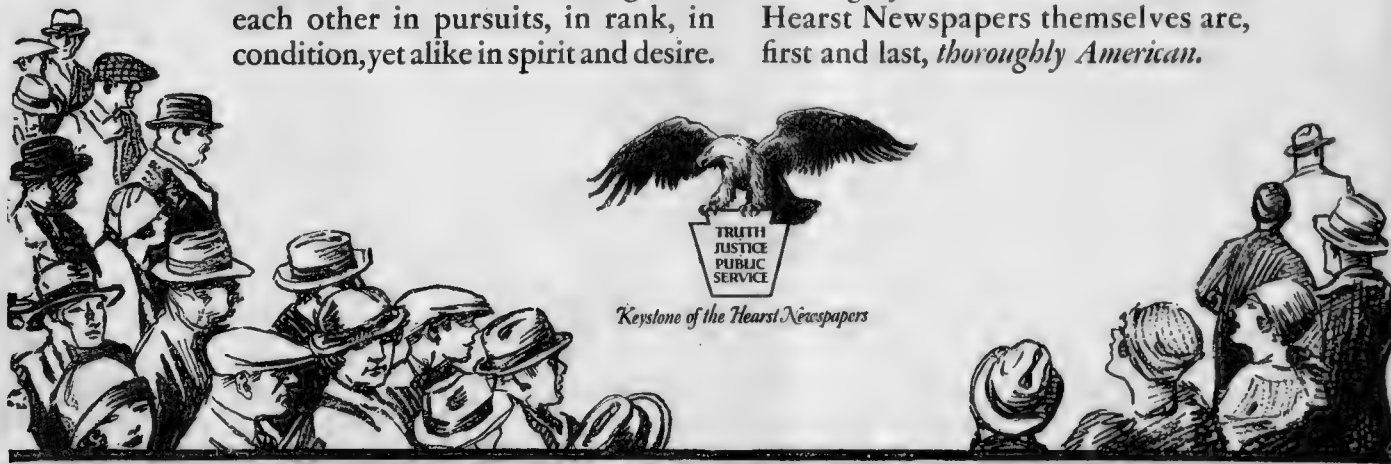

The more than twenty million men and women who read the Hearst Newspapers are not merely so many million individuals; they are a massed personality—a force of over twenty million man-power—rich and poor, high and low, representatives of every class and creed, sprung from ancestors of a hundred races.

Bankers and brokers, artists and artisans, great merchants and keepers of small shops, statesmen and students—preachers, teachers, farmers, millionaires, and clerks—differing from each other in pursuits, in rank, in condition, yet alike in spirit and desire.

No matter how else they differ, these three things they are: young, all of them—not necessarily in years, but in the spirit of eternal youth; ambitious for their own and their country's welfare; progressive in every thought and act.

It is this combination of qualities that makes these more than twenty million readers of Hearst Newspapers so great a factor in the life of America, such spirited exponents of progress, such eager buyers of merchandise.

And, more than anything else, these millions of readers are, first and last, thoroughly American—because the Hearst Newspapers themselves are, first and last, thoroughly American.

OPENING LEADS AGAINST A SUIT DECLARATION NO. 3

SECOND only to Ace-King suits in order of preference, leads come suits headed by King-Queen Jack, standing in a class of their own.

No. 2.

K Q J or more
The King is led, followed by the Jack. To follow with the Queen would deny the Jack.

No. 3.

The Singleton Opening
Third in order comes the lead of a singleton. The fact, however, that leader holds a singleton does not necessarily mean that it should be led, but does mean that if led, to be read as a singleton it should be led initially.

As a general principle or rule, a singleton should not be opened with a lead of four or more trumps; or with a lead of three or less trumps, it may be the only opening that will give game, it can be led and frequently is the only opening that will give game for the declarer.

Therefore, a singleton should be led only when the leader holds a trump in the suit, and when the trump is headed by Ace, King, Queen or Jack.

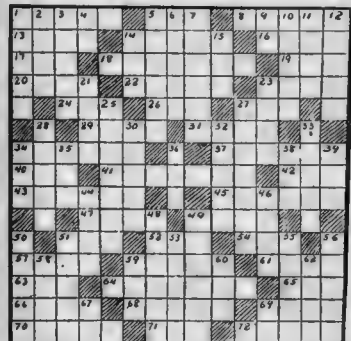

When a holder of a more trump a singleton opening is almost absolute. The general rule is to lead the singleton side suit, to force the declarer to trump and thus to shorten his trump holding to the point where he cannot afford to draw all of the leader's trumps. Many games are saved in this way that could not otherwise be saved. Therefore, the rule should not be departed from without reason, as for example when a leader has secured the contract by a preemptive bid, or when a force would not likely prove to be embarrassing.

The rule that the leader's long suit may be headed by Ace-Queen or King-Jack is a good rule, but not a good reason for not opening it when long in trumps.

Turning to the subject of a suit declaration, it is a common mistake to think that a suit should be opened with a lead of four or more trumps, or with a lead of three or less trumps, it may be the only opening that will give game, it can be led and frequently is the only opening that will give game for the declarer.

HARD LUCK THOUGHTS

By LUCY LOWELL

JUST HAVE heard a sweet, gentle and appealing story of how a woman found a way out of her darkest hour. And because what she did can be done by others, because the happiness she achieved eventually may be reached by some new going through the uncharted paths of doubt and anxiety and perhaps despair, I am going to pass along the tale she told me.

A long time ago it happened, now she is in the acid sea, there was very young. And her husband was very young too, and just getting started in his profession. And there was very little money, and less by and by and no immediate prospect of more and he had no one to help.

And one day when she was more than a little hungry and her feet were bruised because of the thin soles of her shoes and her heart was like lead, she wandered into a park and there she found the grass beneath the trees and wept and wept as if she never would stop weeping.

But of course she did stop finally.

And then she lay still, looking at the sea of stars growing just a few inches from her eyes.

She could not help a little thrill of admiration for the stars, and as she looked at them, she realized that it occurred to her that in that instant that sea of stars, she had found a way out of her darkest hour.

And that was the beginning of a change in the fortunes of the girl and her husband.

It seemed, she explained to me, that as soon as she could take her mind off the thought of their hard luck and think of something pleasant, she had luck left them. They wanted to know if I thought this idea reasonable. And I did think it reasonable—emphatically.

We, all of us, find what we look for, whether it be misfortune or something pleasant.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 30 years and chronic constipation enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets with his treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid bowels.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative mixed with olive oil. No gripping in the "separate" of these little sugar-coated, olive-oiled tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache torpid bowels—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one to two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every day to keep right. Try them. 50c, 10c, 60c.

A Wife's Meditations

By HELEN ROWLAND.

Sportsmanship is the first thing which new demand in a prize fight, a ball game or a game of cards—and the last thing which most of them remember in the game of love.

Sportsmanship is something which very few women have practiced—among women, but which many women have carried to the point of martyrdom in matrimony.

Yet sportsmanship is an essential to the entire in friendship, to love, in a ballroom and in a crowd of street as in the prize ring or on the battlefield.

A woman is a "poor sport" when she takes advantage of a man's shy-ness in a department store to edge in ahead of him and get served out of her turn.

A man is a "poor sport" when he takes advantage of a woman's delicacy by moving past her in the subway train.

A man is a "poor sport" when he spreads himself and his newness over two seats in a street car—when he paid for only one.

Sportsmanship is what makes a man admit that he is beaten in an argument, and a woman one that she was wrong in a quarrel.

Sportsmanship is what makes a woman scorn to rub a man by shed dress and make a man's eyes to compare a woman by brute force.

Sportsmanship is what makes one woman refrain from poisoning another woman's love-interest by making herself too obvious to other men, and makes a man refrain from flirting with a woman when he sees another man seriously trying to win her.

Sportsmanship is what prevents a woman from taking advantage of a man's shyness by asking him to do something which she has no right to demand.

Sportsmanship is what prevents a man from taking advantage of a woman's shyness by asking her to do something which she has no right to demand.

Sportsmanship is what makes a married pair accept their fate and "play the game"—or divorce each other fairly and politely, without backbiting or recrimination.

Yes, verily. Even in Paradise the brightest star in the heavenly crown will be sportsmanlike and the true sport will not wrangle his harp so loudly as to drown the strains of the smaller angel's song.

Sportsmanship is more than honesty; finer than chivalry; greater than love.

Sportsmanship is FAIR PLAY.

BOY WHO ASKED WHY

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

PROBABLY the latest working word in the vocabulary of the average child is "Why?" A short but staggering question which bumps us many times a day. It is a natural and normal question and is but child's method of straightening out facts in his small mind in an orderly and logical way.

A tiny boy who always asked "Why?" whenever his mother asked him to do something, was told one night that it was bedtime. "Why?" countered the wee lad. "Try must I go to bed now?" The mother had explained to him sometime since that he must go to bed because he needed a certain amount of sleep, but it still remained a fact that he entertained a shrewish suspicion that his mother sent him to bed "just to be mean," and "just because he didn't want to go."

So one night she replied to the eternal "Why?" by answering: "Because Mister Clock says you must."

The boy looked at his mother in amazement. Since when had Mister Clock taken the responsibility of his mother's decisions? "Mister Clock says it is 1 o'clock. He is saying that in every little boy you know or play with."

Next day he told his mother over, and the lad didn't say a word but he slowly mused the matter. Finally he found a loophole in even Mister Clock's argument. "This why don't you send him if he says it is bedtime. Mister?" he inquired with a gleam of triumph in his mouth eyes. "Because," answered the mother, "Mister Clock says every people that it is bedtime a little later than he does small people."

Then, as he faded, another question came to him: "Why?"

He said to himself: "I wonder if all of us, and he tells us when to do so many things, for instance if he didn't tell Mister in the morning that it was 8 o'clock, we wouldn't go in and get the porridge."

on or asked to beat up little sister cakes for your finger, and when Daddy came home there would be nothing ready to eat.

"You would both be very hungry and disappointed if that happened, wouldn't you?" Sonny agreed that that would be a dire calamity.

"Then, if the Mister Clock is Daddy's office didn't tell him it was [five-thirty], he wouldn't know it was time to come home to us, and we'd miss him, wouldn't we?"

Sonny nodded thoughtfully. "You see, Son, there are certain things which people do at certain times because Mister Clock tells them. When I call you in from play to luncheon, Mister Clock has told me that your tummy needs some warm bread and nice, creamy milk. Of course, we don't all have to go to bed at the same time but by letting Mister Clock tell us the time that it is time we can all have more fun."

Just suppose you slept all afternoon, and then went out at eight o'clock to play. You couldn't find anyone to play with. You could see where your ball rolled to it wouldn't be any fun at all. We all do about the same things at the same time so that we can get out of our beds when Mister Clock tells us it is time that it should be finished. Then we are all free to play at the same time.

Sonny gazed at Mister Clock's earnest next morning and with his mother's respect, and his mother's happy inspiration in telling him about it, he felt his bridge many a measure of discipline. I hope the idea may be of help to you, too.
